THE CENTENNIAL FOURTH.

Your correspondent, with a party of some ten or twelve gentlemen, left Napanee on Monday, July 8rd, for Mill Point, there to take the Oswego Belle for Oswego. That boat arrived there about 6:30 p.m., with a large party from Belleville on board, and after embarking somewhere in the vicinity of 100 more passengers, she soon steamed away from the dock, the Miner Family Brass Band playing a lively air. A grand charge was at once made for the office by the party from this section, in order to secure state-rooms, but judge of our chagrin when we were informed there was not a room on board that had not been given out, even to the rooms of the employ-ees.

Feeling somewhat hungry, we sought out the supper table, and being determined at all events, to supply the inner man, if we could not get a place to lay our head, the supper was enjoyed. Soon after this had been got through with, Picton was reached, where we remained about three quarters of an hour, and received a very large addition to our numbers, although the steamer Rochester had already left with a large party. What was left for the Belle, however, was the most select of the excursionists.

In turn, the Stone Mills, Abolphus-town, the Island and Bath, were called at, and at all of these places our numbers were added to. At the last place, among the party who came on board, were our genial friends John Hogle, Esq., Warden of the County, and C. L. Rogers, Esq., Clerk of Bath. By this time the crowd on board was so great that there was not a seat even to be had in any part of the boat, either inside or out, up stairs or down, and it was with the greatest difficulty a passage could be effected any where.

THE PROCESSION,

which was just then passing through the streets, was the largest, we were told, they had ever seen before in Oswego. It was made up first of the State Militia, with bands, then Irish and French National and Temperance Societies, in regalia, then the firemen, with engines and hose reels beautifully decorated. After them came citizens in carriages, wagons representing the industries of the place, an immense car, containing children from the Orphan Asylum, in costume, representing the different States of the Union. The rear of the procession was brought up by a motly assemblage of raw-boned horses and dilapidated waggon, creating great merriment along the line of march. There was some four or five bands in the procession, all of which discouraged excellent music, and in their beautiful uniforms added very much to the appearance of the demonstration.

Having seen all we wanted to of the procession our party scattered in different directions, some to remain in Oswego, and others to go further. Not few took the noon train for Syracuse, as it was known there would be gala times in that city on that day. Being for many years a resident of Syracuse, I was among the number who took train for there, where we arrived about 2:15 p. m.

IN SYRACUSE.

Unfortunately, we did not arrive here in time to witness the procession, which was said to be a very grand one, made up somewhat similarly to that in Oswego, only on a much more extensive scale. The city which is one of the handsomest in the state, was literally bedecked with flags, flowers and evergreens; and presented a lively spectacle to us poor "Cannucks," who are accustomed to the quiet which usually reigns supreme in our Town of Napanee. Being pressed on with the crowd of citizens and strangers who infest the Union Depot here, we soon found ourselves in the principal street of the city, where the scene that met our gaze beggars description. Fearing we would be taken for "flats" on whom the "sharps" could operate, we did not stop long to examine the beauty of the buildings, or the tastefulness and costliness of their decorations. Bands of music were here and there to be seen

Soon after leaving Bath the upper part of the saloon was shut off from the rest by the slide door being drawn, and a large flag hung across, for the purpose of making "shake downs" for those not fortunate enough to have state-rooms. These accommodations were soon gobbled up, and your correspondent, who was at the time engaged with a number of gentlemen in friendly converse, had allowed this opportunity to pass, so that for the night and the balance of the trip he was literally without a place to rest either head or feet.

Up to the time of arrival at Kingston, about 1½ o'clock, a.m., the night was all that could be desired, a beautiful moon shining over-head, while the Bay was as tranquil as could possibly be, until the Lower Gap was reached, when the boat was tossed around considerably. Searching for some secluded spot on board where the beauties of the Bay might be seen undisturbed, I made the circuit of the boat several times, without finding such a place, but at almost every turn was met by the sight of lovers, either with their heads pillowed on each other, or else pouring out tales of affection. Whilst "taking stock" of such sights as these, our eye fell upon one of our Napanee gentlemen who had found a retired place, and a seat beside a charming looking lass, with whom his conversation was so eager as not to notice our prying eyes were upon him. It is not our intention to be personal, but we would suggest to married ladies the propriety of accompanying their husbands on these long trips.

Bands of music were here and there to be seen escorting some portion of the processionists to their places of rendezvous, while immense crowds followed.

Some idea of the magnitude of the display made here may be formed, when I say that on one building alone, — the dry goods store of D. M. Carney & Sons, — the decorations cost upwards of $1,500, and gave employment for some time in advance to a large number of men. The building stands on the corner of Salina and Fayette Streets, and the part facing each street, although five stories high, was decorated from top to the bottom with flags, streamers, mottoes, stars, &c. On the top of the buildings was four bronzed eagles, with spread wings, holding in their talons such mottoes as "Proclaim Liberty through all the land." "Freedom for all," &c. The Onondago County Savings Bank was also gorgeously decorated, while just in front of it had been erected a large arch. Everywhere was conspicuous in large figures, 1776, 1876.

About 4 o'clock a very heavy rain storm set in, which continued till after six, so that the fire-works had to be postponed till the next evening. This was a source of regret to us, as we would not be able to remain to see them. The cost of the fire-works, got up expressly for the occasion, was $3,500, and you, dear reader, will readily understand what a sight they must have made.

As Syracuse is the terminus of a number of railways, it was estimated there was upwards of 50,000 strangers in the city on that day, and day following.

Up till 8 o'clock the next evening, the time was agreeably spent by myself and companions in calling upon old friends, with whom many pleasant recollection of by-gone days were raked up and hearty laughs enjoyed.

At Kingston, our already crowded boat, took on board a couple of hundred more passengers, and precisely at was a rather rough one, and there were many on board who wished themselves off, fearing from their pallid countenances the way in which they were tossed around the deck. Nothing serious, however, occurred on the way over, there not being a disturbance of any kind, and but very few persons observable, on whom there were symptoms of drunkenness.

Oswego at last hove in sight about 10 o'clock, and by 10:30 we had moored alongside the dock, and the precious cargo was soon discharged. As the passengers commenced to go ashore a slight fall of rain commenced, but it was however, of short duration.

IN OSWEGO.

Having disembarked, the party betook themselves to sight-seeing, and scattered in all directions. The city was very handsomely decorated, every business house and private dwelling being literally covered with the "star spangled banner," while in a few places the dear old "flag that's braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze" was observable. The people themselves had put on holiday attire, and the frequent explosions of small cannon, &c., only gave vent to the loyalty animating their bosoms.

Oswego, thinking we would be in time for the boat. On our arrival there, however, we were informed the boat had left about 6 p. m. As things afterwards turned out we were not at all sorry that this was the case,—or, at least, one of our party was not as on the trip over he had experienced the evil effects upon his stomach of being a landsman.

We took up our quarters at the Oswego Hotel, kept by Mr. Loomis, where we were made very comfortable, and in the morning took train for Watertown.

After a very tedious ride in an accommodation train we arrived in Watertown about 1 o'clock p. m., where we took dinner, and then set out to see what would be seen here.

Our treasury being somewhat depleted we were not long in finding friends who, after treating us in the manner the patriarchs of old did the traveller in the wilderness,—with true hospitality,—and having put scrip in our purse sent us on our way rejoicing.

We left Watertown about 4 o'clock, and on our arrival in Cape Vincent found the steamer Maud ready for a start for Kingston, where we were landed about 7 o'clock p. m., right glad to be once more on British soil.

Home was reached the next morning, where we were gladly welcomed by the anxious ones left behind.

CANADIAN.

A young girl in Montreal was roughly handled by a scamp. She became hysterical, then insane, and is now imprisoned.

At Fenelon Falls during the gale on the 5th inst., a brick block of four shops in course of erection was blown down.

A boy named McEachren, 9 years old, was killed at Kirkfield on the 5th inst., by a falling tree.

The storm on the 5th inst., was very general over the country, and great damage was done to crops.

Three hundred and eleven boxes of cheese have been shipped to the great World's Fair from the counties of Oxford and Perth.

Jacob Rushton, of Ridgetown, got entangled in the machinery of a shingle mill on the 6th inst., and was killed before aid could be rendered.

A Brantford clergyman preached two sermons last Sunday, neither of which lasted longer than twenty minutes. It is not surprising that he is a popular preacher.

A young man aged 21 years, named Wm. Thomas James, has been arrested for setting fire to the premises of Mr. Malcolmson, St. Catharines. James is idiotic, and acknowledged the offence.

It is reported at Ottawa that France has admitted that all territorial rights on the shore of Newfoundland belong to great Britain, who undertakes to preserve law; while French fishermen are to be allowed to use the beach for drying fish.

It is reported in Montreal by members of the Irish Home Rule League, that Messrs. Butt, Q. C., M. P., and O'Connor Power, will visit this country in August, and have signified their intention of making a considerable sojourn in this city.

RIDGETOWN, July 6.—Yesterday Jacob Rushton, a young man living five miles north of this place, while putting on the main belt of a shingle mill, got his arm entangled, and in an instant it was torn from his body at the shoulder and thrown a distance of several feet. He died from loss of blood before the doctors arrived. Deceased leaves a wife and three small children.

The St. Catharines by-law, in reference to impounding stray animals, is said by sufferers to impose burdens grievous to be borne on the owners of the captured cattle. For every animal arrested the Chief of Police gets two dollars for the town treasury, and the pound-keeper another dollar, half of which he retains, and hands the other half to the town. Three dollars a head soon figures up when a drove is driven in, or when the solitary cow or horse repeatedly offends; but the amount will tend to cause the owners of animals to find a way to keep them off the streets.

AROUND HOME.

THE 12TH IN PICTON.—There was a grand demonstration in Picton on the 12th, of Orangemen and Young Britons. In addition to those from Picton and surrounding country, there was a large number from Belleville in the procession.

GOING TO ENLARGE.—The Municipal Council of the town of Picton intend to apply to the Governor in Council to have certain lands adjacent to the present limits added to the town, in other words the limits are to be enlarged. When this is accomplished what airs the Picton folks will put on!

MCQUILLAN.—James McQuillan, who is in goal in Belleville, charged killed are the Chief and Assistant engineers. Capt. Wilson was wounded, his hand was blown off. The Thunderer was making her trial trip on a measured mile in Stokes Bay. The vessel is now at Spithead."

A Reuter despatch from Portsmouth says that twenty-one persons were killed and sixty wounded by the explosion. Many of the wounded cannot recover.

A still later despatch from Portsmouth says it is feared that twenty-six were fatally wounded.

London, July 15.—The following is the latest from Portsmouth in regard to the Thunderer disaster:—Twenty-five of the crew are dead. The bodies were shockingly mutilated, the flesh being stripped from the limbs by the escaping steam. The forward stoke hole, where the explosion occurred, is divided from the after stoke hole by water tight bulkheads. The stokers in the latter were protected from the fragments caused by the explosion, but were literally boiled alive by the steam.

There was a thousand dollar cargo of fresh salmon for the Upper Province markets on the train by which he travelled."

Hon. Mr. Burpee has written a note to be forwarded to the Washington Government, through the British Ambassador, setting forth in full the Canadian case, with reference to reciprocal navigation of the canals and waters of both countries under the Washington Treaty.

It is expected that her Majesty's agent on the Fisheries Commission under the Washington Treaty will reach Halifax next Monday, and confer with the Hon. A. J. Smith about assembling the Commissioners. Commissioner Whitcher has been summoned to Halifax and left for there last week.

The French Protestants of Montreal hitherto maintaining a connection with the French Canadian Missionary Society, have formed themselves into an independent Church, judging that by assuming an unsectarian and purely national character they would achieve a larger success among French Canadian Roman Catholics.

DROWNED.—A twelve-year old son of Mr. Chaffe, of Chatham, was drowned at that place on the 6th inst., while bathing in the River Thames. Two other boys who were with him did their best to save him but failed. The body was recovered after having been in the water one half an hour. The coroner thought it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

A VETERAN.—One of the men of "A" Battery, stationed at Kingston, Henry A. Montrose, who received an honorary discharge, was one of the Noble Six Hundred who took part in the memorable charge at Balacava. He had been wounded but was spared with 61 of his comrades to hear his name with theirs extolled for bravery. He now, as a civilian, is out of his element.

CHEAP FREIGHTS.—The Brockville Recorder says:—"Mr. Kearns, of the firm of Kearns & Marshall, goes up to Belleville to-day, to ship 1,000,000 feet of lumber purchased at that place for the American market. We understand that he has secured its transportation to Ogdensburg, for 75 cents per thousand, which we should judge was a rather cheap rate."

LOCATING.—The K. & P. Railway Board of Directors has given orders for the immediate locating of the line, as far as the Mississippi river, to which point the road is subsidized by Government. Delayed County bonus money and interest to the amount of $40,000 can be called for at once to supply the means of operation, and this section of the road may be completed

LONDON, July 14.—A Daily News Vienna despatch says:—"The authorities here are receiving petition of annexation to Austria from the Bosnian Catholics." The Mahomedan Boys have held a meeting and expressed their loyalty to the Porte, but agreed Austrian was preferable to Servian rule.

The Roumanian Chambers have held a secret sitting to consider a request of Russia to permit the passage of a large number of volunteers to Servia. The Telegraph has received a manifesto from Belgrade, signed by a number of Bosnians and Herzegovinians, asking for English sympathy.

VIENNA, July 14.—The Austrian Government has every reason to believe that the accounts of the Bulgarian atrocities are enormously exaggerated.

LONDON, July 14.—Lord Derby to-day received a deputation on the Eastern Question, consisting of 40 members of Parliament and 571 gentlemen from all parts of the Kingdom.

Mr. John Bright presented a memorial in favour of strict neutrality, except when it may be possible to interpose friendly offices to mitigate the horrors and to hasten the close of the conflict.

Lord Derby, in reply to Mr. Bright, acknowledged the importance of the deputation, and spoke in sympathy with its objects. He said that although he might not endorse the exact expression of the memorial, he agreed absolutely and entirely in its object. He had refused to adhere to the Berlin memorandum, because it was a compromise between the Powers who were desirous of acting together, yet not quite agreeing. He did not think, therefore, that a compromise would ultimately work. He felt sure that the Porte would not accept it, nor even the insurgents. under the Washington Treaty will reach Halifax next Monday, and confer with the Hon. A. J. Smith about assembling the Commissioners. Commissioner Whitchee has been summoned to Halifax and left for there last week.

The French Protestants of Montreal hitherto maintaining a connection with the French Canadian Missionary Society, have formed themselves into an independent Church, judging that by assuming an unsectarian and purely national character they would achieve a larger success among French Canadian Roman Catholics.

DROWNED.—A twelve-year old son of Mr. Chaffe, of Chatham, was drowned at that place on the 6th inst., while bathing in the River Thames. Two other boys who were with him did their best to save him but failed. The body was recovered after having been in the water one half an hour. The coroner thought it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

HAMILTON, July 5.—The lad who fell dead while playing in the palace grounds last night was named Edward Ira Richardson, and was an apprentice to the printing trade. He was running in a race at the time, and was seen to fall by his companions, but no notice was taken till the close of the race, when he was picked up in an insensible condition and died in three or four minutes.

CHEAPSIDE, July.—Yesterday while Messrs. Booth and Kinsley were attempting to cross the mouth of the Sandusky Creek in a buggy, the horse suddenly disappeared in a quicksand and was drowned before assistance could be rendered. Booth, the owner of the horse, had a narrow escape from drowning.

The revenue collected at Ottawa on account of excise for June was:—Spirits $5,720.29; tobacco, $2,342.70; malt, $269.75; liquors, $45.10; total $8,377.84. The customs duty collected on imports during the same month was $12,832.83. The total amount collected during the past year ending same date was $108,682.07; amount collected during the previous year $249,467.60; a falling off in the past year of $38,975.53.

THE VETERANS.—The Ottawa Free Press of the 3rd inst.:—"To-day the officers of the Militia Department commenced sending away the cheques of $20 to each of the veterans of the war of 1812, who have established their claim to the gratuity voted by the Dominion Parliament. There are about 3,060 veterans all told, being 150 more than were paid last year. This increase is caused by additions to the list from remote districts where the news of the gratuity having been voted had not penetrated in time for them to make application last year. Since the last payment 120 veterans have died.

comrades to hear his name with theirs extolled for bravery. He now, as a civilian, is out of his element,

CHEAP FREIGHTS.—The Brockville Recorder says:—"Mr. Kearns, of the firm of Kearns & Marshall, goes up to Belleville to-day, to ship 1,000,000 feet of lumber purchased at that place for the American market. We understand that he has secured its transportation to Ogdensburg, for 75 cents per thousand, which we should judge was a rather cheap rate."

LOCATING.—The K. & P. Railway Board of Directors has given orders for the immediate locating of the line, as far as the Mississippi river, to which point the road is subsidized by Government. Delayed County bonus money and interest to the amount of $40,000 can be called for at once to supply the means of operation, and this section of the road may be completed this year. The preliminary surveys have been very thoroughly made.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—Kingston was again visited by the fire fiend on Tuesday evening last. Offord & Co's shoe factory, a very fine stone building, was completely demolished and by its destruction some 200 or 300 hands thrown out of employment. Very fortunately however it was confined to the factory. Had it gone beyond that the loss would have been a serious one. The insurance will amount to over $7,000.

THE GRAND JUNCTION.—The Council of the Township of Alnwick have submitted a By-law proposing a bonus of $4,000 to the Grand Junction. It will be voted upon on the 26th instant. The Hastings By-law for $5,000 will not be voted upon until the 22nd. Our western friends show in this practical manner a warm interest in the success of the road, which is worthy of imitation by the municipal body nearer home.

TERRIBLE DISASTER.

London, July 14.—The "Standard" publishes a special despatch from Portsmouth saying:—"To-day one of the Thunderer's boilers exploded forward. Fifteen persons were killed and twenty wounded. Among the Question, consisting of 40 members of Parliament and 571 gentlemen from all parts of the Kingdom.

Mr. John Bright presented a memorial in favour of strict neutrality, except when it may be possible to interpose friendly offices to mitigate the horrors and to hasten the close of the conflict.

Lord Derby, in reply to Mr. Bright, acknowledged the importance of the deputation, and spoke in sympathy with its objects. He said that although he might not endorse the exact expression of the memorial, he agreed absolutely and entirely in its object. He had refused to adhere to the Berlin memorandum, because it was a compromise between the Powers who were desirous of acting together, yet not quite agreeing. He did not think, therefore, that a compromise would ultimately work. He felt sure that the Porte would not accept it, nor even the insurgents. The rendezvous of the fleet in Besikia bay was not England's initiative, but of all the ambassadors at Constantinople who wanted to be armed against eventualities, and against a massacre of British and other subjects. So far as human foresight could discern a general war was most unlikely to result from the present conflict. France and Italy for financial and other reasons do not desire war. Germany has no direct interest in the question. England will not make war, and Austria, though peculiarly placed, will not break the peace for reasons of self-interest. A powerful party in Russia sympathizes with the Slavonians, and desires the erection of a Slavonic empire under Russian guidance and influence, but that party is not in power. The Czar is a sincere lover of peace, and Russia has other reasons, her finances and the extent of her Asiatic conquests, for not wishing war. The understanding reached at Reichstadt was on the basis of absolute non-interference during the conflict, not excluding efforts in favour of peace; but if any steps should be taken they would be in concert with all the Powers. England's endeavour is to keep the conflict within its present limits, and to impress that view upon others. Lord Derby said he had no doubt of England's success and continued: "All we desire is to see a fair play. If Turkey is destroyed, we cannot help it. We have guaranteed Turkey against murder, but not against suicide or sudden death. If the opportunity of mediation offers, which opportunity may even now be at hand, we shall avail ourselves of it."

Lord Derby afterwards received a deputation of the Christian League on the same subject which was introduced by Mr. Morley, and Earl Russell's memorial was read.

Lord Derby severely criticized their memorial, though in the main he sympathized with their objects. In regard to the reported atrocities, he said that doubtless both sides committed

SUNRISE.

The sunrise fills the eastern hills
With its glittering rays outspread,
And now is seen its silvery sheen
On the fleecy clouds o'erhead.

The stars shine pale above the vale
Before the sun's rays fading,
And in the west a crimson crest
The murky sky is shading.

The bird's blithe note is heard afloat,
From quiet grove a-flowing,
And, from the still and distant hill,
Is heard the cock's shrill crowing.

Bedecked with dew the meadow too,
A field of gems is seeming,
While, clear and bright, a ray of light
From every drop is streaming.

And rising high in the eastern sky
The sun his way is moving;
And thus each day he takes his way,
New life to nature giving.

GOOD WASHING FLUID.

Some time ago I saw a recipe for making old pantaloons look like new. The lady who gave the information, said it took her one hour. It took me about half of that time, and the pantaloons were very dirty. I took a press-board—any board will do—placed it inside the legs, then took the scrubbing-brush, and with the help of a little washing fluid, that we make, and a hot flat-iron to dry with, they were soon ready to wear again, and looked nearly as good as new.

Here is a recipe for the Washing-Fluid:—Take 1 pound soda ash, a piece of unslacked lime about the size of a tea-cup and $\frac{1}{2}$ gallon of soft water. Place them in a kettle, and boil about fifteen minutes; take off the stove, then add $\frac{1}{2}$ gallon more water, let it stand, then skim. After it has thoroughly settled, turn it carefully into a jug, allow none of the settlings to escape; then add one gallon more of soft water to what remains in the kettle, let it stand for a short time, then turn this also into the jug, and you have two gallons of washing fluid at a cost of about ten cents. Soak the clothes over night in clear water, then to a boiler of water add one tea-cup of fluid, and slice thin about two ounces of soap, let this thoroughly dissolve in the warm water, by rubbing a little, and a whatever that may be, whether for heavy or light work, whether for pleasure or profit. For this there are different dispositions and characteristics. All this must be taken into careful consideration.

It will thus be seen that to teach our animals especially our horses, is a science. Yet, what recklessness do we see! It is properly termed "breaking" horses. And the principle is too largely extended to all our stock. Kind treatment is food; it is prolongation of life and of usefulness; it is increased efficiency, and contributes to the pleasure both of the man and beast.

FRUIT TREE TRIMMING.

Of all the blunders, says the Gardener's Monthly, that the common farmer and some others make with trees, none is so common or so hurtful, and which he is so long finding out and of which he might know so certainly, as the practice of cutting off lower limbs. All over the country nothing is more common than to see mutilated trees on almost every farm. Big limbs cut off near the body of the tree, and of course rotting to the heart. This is a great sin against nature. The very limbs necessary to protect the tree from wind and sun, and just where limbs are needed most, and are cut away. But the greatest injury is the rotting that always takes place when a big limb is sawed off—too big to heal over, it must rot, and being kept moist by the growing tree, is in the right condition to rot, and being on the body, the rotting goes to the heart and hurts the whole tree. It is common all over the country to see large orchards mutilated in this way. We often see holes in the trees where big limbs have been cut away, where squirrels and even raccoons could crawl in. Perhaps the only reason these trimmers would give is that lower limbs were easiest got at, and some would say they wanted to raise a crop under the tree.

TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF COARSE HAY.

The nutritive value of bog hay, prairie hay, or salt marsh hay may be greatly increased, with a clear profit to the farmer, by adding, at a trifling cost, a small proportion of other feeds containing more of the albuminoids. The

We do a washing for five in about two hours that used to take from half to two-thirds of a day. The clothes should be thoroughly rinsed.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

The brute is not given to reflection; he receives impressions. As these are few, compared with the thoughts of man, they are easily remembered. And every man who has ever given the thought attention knows well that the brute has a good memory; nothing seems to escape him. Here then is a chance for direction. By correct treatment, you cause him to know only what is correct; he will remember nothing else. But treated to error, he will remember that. All the impressions you make upon him, influence you him, and him, he is influenced by nothing else. If you show yourself kind to him, yet resoluteness will decide him; he will own you willingly and readily as a master. But contradict yourself to him and you will puzzle him; he will not know what to make of it; he will be uncertain, on the hint for a balk. Of all things avoid this, as it is sure to embarrass and prevent a clear course from being known.

This leads us to the next thought—give as few impressions as possible in the necessary training. The less that is to be remembered the clearer is the way. There should be no confusion if you would secure promptness and an unerring reliance.

In this way your animal becomes a machine, as certainly obedient as one of material construction. So you want

TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF COARSE HAY.

The nutritive value of bog hay, prairie hay, or salt marsh hay may be greatly increased, with a clear profit to the farmer, by adding, at a trifling cost, a small proportion of other feeds containing more of the albuminoids. The latter by rendering coarse hay more digestible, make it also more nutritious.

If, for example, a farmer who has a ton of bog hay, worth perhaps five or six dollars, will judiciously add 250 lbs. of concentrated feed, costing four or five dollars, the value of the hay may be increased to twenty dollars or more. This principal is clearly illustrated in the following combination, which has been successfully tried:—

Corn meal, 100 lbs.; rye meal, 40 lbs.; oil cake (or cotton seed cake), 50 lbs.; bean meal, 50 lbs.; bog hay (cut and steamed), 2,000 lbs.—2,500 lbs.

The total cost of the above should not exceed ten or twelve dollars, while the feeding value would be twenty-five or thirty dollars. In some cases the difference is greater than this,

The following statement made by Mr. A. B. Allen to Prof. Atwater, in the Agriculturist, corresponds to the above and confirms it. Referring to the statement that 267 lbs. of average cotton-seed meal, costing, say, $5.34, would make a ton of early cut bog hay, of average composition, about equal in nutritive value to a ton of the best upland hay, he says, "Now the latter is worth $40 per ton on my farm at Tom's River, N. J., while the former, cut from my own meadows, cost me not over $5—difference I save in $35. I suspected this some time ago, and in the autumn of 1874 I commenced feeding my bog hay, and I didn't see but the cows gave just as much milk, and make just as much butter and that the horses look as well and do as much work, with the same ease as when feed good upland hay. But I have lessened the quantity of cotton-seed meal given

ANOTHER TUMBLE DOWN

The brute is not given to reflection; he receives impressions. As these are few, compared with the thoughts of man, they are easily remembered. But contradict yourself to him and you will puzzle him; he will not know what to make of it; he will be uncertain, on the hint for a balk. Of all things avoid this, as it is sure to embarrass and prevent a clear course from being known.

This leads us to the next thought—give as few impressions as possible in the necessary training. The less that is to be remembered the clearer is the way. There should be no confusion if you would secure promptness and an unerring reliance.

In this way your animal becomes a machine, as certainly obedient as one of material construction. So you want your horse, your working cattle, and not less does the cow need kind attention. She will thrive by being petted. The maternal instinct is touched by gentleness, and will yield increased quantities of milk. So will the hen lay the better, when made comfortable. Your sheep, and even the swine, are better for kind treatment. Your dog responds to faithfulness. In a word, it is with the brute as it is with man; kindness has power, and it is the lever to work with, but must go with decision; two must harmonize. Only in this way can the dominant law of repugnance be overcome and tractability established. This is a principle that cannot be ignored. It underlies all our success in brute training, of whatever kind, but particularly as applied to the motive power on the farm. This secured, the rest is less difficult. It only needs judgment to see, and care in carrying out—in making just what is wanted. Hence there is no model to be sought aid may be obtained by consulting good authorities, or applying to practical men who have a record of success. The point is to make of your animal what you want him for,

be increased to twenty dollars or more. This principle is clearly illustrated in the following combination, which has been successfully tried:—

Corn meal, 100 lbs; rye meal, 40 lbs; oil cak (or cotton, seed cake), 50 lbs.; bean meal, 50 lbs.; bog hay (cut and steamed), 2,000 lbs.—2,500 lbs.

But I have lessened the quantity of cotton-seed meal given above, and sstitute for this a mixture of wheat bran and Indian meal—these three costing as much as the cotton-seed alone. I find it better to vary the feed. Thus, you see, that like the Mr. W. referred to, I also corroborate the German experiments." Mr. Allen likewise fully endorses the view of Mr. Harrs, as to the high value of corn-meal for mixing with coarse foods.

Common itch is caused by a microscopic insect eating into the skin. Cover the part with sweet oil, and the disease is cured; as the insect breathes through its skin, the oil plugs up the pores and death suffers from suffocation. The mildew of plants is destroyed by sprinkling over them a mixture of two-third water and one third molasses; the water evaporates and leaves a thin film of sugar and varnish, which stops up the lungs of the plant and would die in a few days if the rain did not wash it off. A child was covered with gold-leaf for a public occasion, but came so near dying in a few hours, that the authorities ordered its removal so nearly alike are plants, animals, and man.

NAPANEE JULY 20th, 1876.

The usual half-yearly examinations of candidates for Public School certificates have been in progress throughout the country during the past week. The result, so far as heard from, has been most disastrous to those applying. The papers were unusually severe, and few were able to obtain the necessary number of marks to entitle them to a certificate. We question the wisdom of making the second and third class examinations so difficult.

Local capitalists of Belleville are about taking steps to have the Grand Junction Railway completed. Among the names mentioned as forming the Syndicate of the proposed company we observe those of Alex. Brown, contractor, Sanford Baker and Hon. Lewis Wallbridge. These men are well known for their financial standing and business enterprise, and should they succeed in inducing a sufficient number to join them the road will be completed.

The writ for the election of a member to represent Glengary in the Commons, in the place of Mr. Archibald McNabb, unseated by petition, has been issued. The nomination will be on the 24th, inst., and election on 31st. Mr. McNabb will probably be the Reform candidate again, as nothing was proved against him to disqualify. The Conservatives have induced Mr. McLennan, of Montreal, to sustain their cause, and he has issued his address accordingly.

The Conservative press, led by the Mail, are clamoring for a dissolution of the Dominion Parliament and a general election. The issue of the recent elections in North and South Ontario has inspired the Opposition with the belief that the Meakenzie Administration no longer possesses the confidence of the people. The conclusion is so outrageously absurd and ridiculous as to be unworthy of serious remark.

ometer is up among the nineties, than a cool dip. But in our eagerness to enjoy the luxury we should not forget that great caution is absolutely necessary in order that benefit instead of injury may be derived therefrom. We too frequently plunge into the water with the blood at a boiling heat and the whole system open with perspiration. The sudden change of temperature upon the exposed surface drives the blood to the brain and apoplexy or cramps (the same thing) follow. The consequence of this want of precaution is—the death of many by drowning.

THE FASHIONS.

(Harper's Bazar.)

THE HABIT.

Close-fitting, long-waisted habits are the fashionable over dresses worn abroad. They are made of the Oriental fabrics brought into notice since the Prince of Wales' visit to India, such as lampas, Chinese silks, Indian crape, and damask Siciliennes. This long over dress is made of dull, dusky shades, and brightened by the brilliant embroideries hitherto mentioned, and with trimming laces of bright scarlet or blue in Smyrna patterns. The front of the garment is close-fitting, straight, and fastened by a single row of buttons, or else it is made with a waistcoat that is richly embroidered, and invariably trimmed with a jabot of lace. The back is almost patchy with its many long, narrow forms, that have seams beginning on the shoulders and ending low on the tournure, giving the fashionable appearance of slenderness. The skirt is draped very low on the lower skirt, and does not obtrude itself by elaborate proportions.

INDIA SCARFS.

Among other Eastern goods are scarfs of India silk draped as over-skirts. Some of these are the plain twilled silk we are accustomed to, while others have a crape-like finish, and are wrought all over with various colored silks, to represent flowers, birds, and in some instances Japanese draperies on skirts, not only in silks, but in laces. French modists now drape wide laces across the front of evening and bridal dresses instead of using them for flouncings.

HALF HANDKERCHIEFS.

Small squares of silks for shawls and and fichus are also imported from the far East. They are worn tied loosely around the neck as half handkerchiefs, or else they are lapped across the bosom in fichu style. They are made of delicate colors, and richly fringed, or else edged with embroidery and lace. Some pretty half handkerchiefs made at home by ladies of taste are merely three-cornered pieces of pale or of dark blue or cardinal red crape or soft silk bordered with a white embroidered muslin ruffle. Worth adds peasant fashions of the dress material to many of his summer dress may be of the favorite cream-colored tulle, or the square-meshed ecru grenadine looped with gay Roman ribbons, or with double-faced ribbons that are cream on one side and black on the other.

Beaded laces have been abandoned by many, but they are found in use at the most exclusive houses, and are sent over from Paris on some of the handsomest dresses. Thus there are black brocaded grenadines and the rich damasse stuffs made up over silk, with two or three diagonal tabliers, each edged with lace in which blue or steel beads are thickly woven. The basque is trimmed with the same beaded lace, and the effect is very distinguished. Other dresses of black Chambray gauze just received from Worth's are trimmed similarly with lace, in which are finely cut jet beads. The fringes and galloons of jet are not, however, seen. Merchants who have gone abroad to select their fall and winter goods write back that Worth is determined to restore jet trimmings to the favor they so recently lost. Pingat and other leading Parisian houses prefer wool braids and those in which gilt and silver threads are woven. At the summer watering-places these metal galloons are now seen as trimming for rich dresses of camel's-hair and of grenadine; blue camel's-hair of the darkest shade has rows of wide silver braid; black or seal brown camel's-hair has five or six rows of half-inch gold braid around the polonaise; basques and over-skirts of bottle green grenadine have green galloons thickly interspersed with silver threads.

CANADIAN SHIPPING BILL.

The question which has been before the British Parliament for some time in reference to Canadian Shipping, will in all likelihood be settled in our favor. While the Shipping Bill was before the Commons, Mr. Plimsoll managed to have a clause inserted, absolutely prohibiting the carrying of deckloads in the winter, in place of the clause copied from the Canadian Act, which allows deck-loading under stringent conditions. Representations of the injury that would result to Canadian shipping were made by our Deputy-Minister of Marine, which were referred to a committee of Cabinet ministers consisting of the Lord Chancellor, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Duke of Richmond, and Lord Carnarvon. The House of Lords in committee have made an amendment to the Bill and it now stands for a third reading on Friday next, after which the assent of the Commons will be asked to the Lords' amendment.

FLUCTUATING POLITICS.

He was seedy and battered, and he looked "powerful" dry. He entered a Main street saloon and approaching the bar said to the barkeeper: "It's a good ticket, aint it?" "First rate," replied the barkeeper. "You betcher life them's my men; Hayes'n Wheeler for me. 'Rah for Hayes'n Wheeler! Set out some o' yer 'Publican whiskey, barkeeper." "My friend," replied the barkeeper, "you're a little off: this is a

Mr. McNabb will probably be the Reform candidate again, as nothing was proved against him to disqualify. The Conservatives have induced Mr. McLennan, of Montreal, to sustain their cause, and he has issued his address accordingly.

The Conservative press, led by the Mail, are clamoring for a dissolution of the Dominion Parliament and a general election. The issue of the recent elections in North and South Ontario has inspired the Opposition with the belief that the Mackenzie Administration no longer possesses the confidence of the people. The conclusion is so outrageously absurd and ridiculous as to be unworthy of serious remark. Mr. Mackenzie closed the last session of the House with the largest majority that ever supported a Canadian Ministry, and it is not likely that the small majorities against him in the Ontarios will disconcert his plans to any great extent.

The war between Turkey and her rebellious provinces has assumed dangerous proportions. The Servians were the aggressors and crossed into Turkey with a considerable force, but thus far the fighting has been in favor of the Turks. The most barbarous atrocities are practiced on both sides, and though the great powers of Europe have agreed to observe a strict neutrality, the probability is that they will be drawn into the conflict, unless the difficulty be soon settled. The Turks have employed Circassians to lay waste the country of the insurgents by burning villages, destroying property and even murdering men, women and children. They also bring Christian women and children before the army during a battle and have them exposed to the enemy's bullets. This is done with the intention of diverting the fury of the Servians and giving themselves an advantage. The Servians and other insurgents being mostly Christians they would naturally object to firing upon defenceless members of their own faith, if aware of their presence in the Turkish trenches. Lord Derby has repeatedly assured the British people that non-intervention is the policy of the Government, and other powers seem equally as determined to keep out of the war.

Some of these are the plain twilled silk we are accustomed to, while others have a crape-like finish, and are wrought all over with various colored silks, to represent flowers, birds, and in some instances Japanese draperies on skirts, not only in silks, but in laces. French modists now drape wide laces across the front of evening and bridal dresses instead of using them for flouncings.

Some pretty half handkerchiefs made at home by ladies of taste are merely three-cornered pieces of pale or of dark blue or cardinal red crape or soft silk bordered with a white embroidered muslin ruffle. Worth adds peasant fashions of the dress material to many of his summer costumes, and this does away with the necessity for a lace sacque or mantle. White lace, muslin, or else white silk half handkerchiefs, give a most distinguished finish to costumes of finished silk, foulard, or grenadine.

FRENCH FANCIES.

Worth's fancy for gay Scotch tartans is shown in the brilliant costumes he prepares for the seaside resorts. For instance, with skirts of bottle green velvet he makes over dresses of soft thick tartan silk. The over dress has a Breton basque with velvet vest fastened up by pearl buttons and trimmed with a jabot of lace. The black and white shepherd's-plaid is also made up over green or blue velvet skirts, and the material is cut in such a way that all the breadths are bias, making the checks seem elongated. The trimming is a vest, cuffs, collar, pocket, and wide bias bands of velvet, like that of the skirt.

The princesse dress so popular with Parisians this season is merely an elongation of the princesse polonaise in Bazar No. 4, Vol. IX.; it also resembles the princesse dress now worn by little girls, and for this reason it is called in France the Babe dress. It is made of summer silks and of fine woolen fabrics. The back has the heavy kilt-pleating, and its plainness is relieved by a wide sash which passes low around the hips, with a chatelaine bag pendent on the right side. Sometimes Worth buttons this dress behind, and makes it fit the figure as if it were moulded in it—a very pretty fashion for young ladies with well rounded figures. For those who are too slight the waist is made double breasted.

Among other tasteful dresses worn at the summer resorts are those of dark stuffs trimmed with white English embroidery. Seal brown, navy blue, and invisible green, foulards and sponges are very effective when trimmed with wrought fruffles and white muslin; and the same colors are chosen in summer camel's hair and relived by these white frills. Representations of the injury that would result to Canadian shipping were made by our Deputy-Minister of Marine, which were referred to a committee of Cabinet ministers consisting of the Lord Chancellor, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Duke of Richmond, and Lord Carnarvon. The House of Lords in committee have made an amendment to the Bill and it now stands for a third reading on Friday next, after which the assent of the Commons will be asked to the Lords' amendment.

FLUCTUATING POLITICS.

He was seedy and battered, and he looked "powerful" dry. He entered a Main street saloon and approaching the bar said to the barkeeper: "It's a good ticket, aint it?" "First rate," replied the barkeeper. "You betcher life them's my men; Hayes'n Wheeler for me. 'Rah for Hayes'n Wheeler! Set out some o' yer 'Publican whiskey, barkeeper.'" "My friend," replied the barkeeper, "you're a little off; this is a Democratic house." "Thunder exclaimed the soaker, "the Dimmycrats aint got nobody to holler for yit, and I'm as dry as a powder-horn and a cent twixt me and eternity." "My friend," said the obliging barkeeper, "while differing with you in politics, I cannot resist your appeal; help yourself to some of this," and he set out a glass and the bottle of lightning kept for the special use of stiff's." The "stiff" poured out a glassful of the stuff, emptied it into his throat, and when he got through coughing and wiping his eyes on his coat-sleeve, said: "I aint got no money; but if I was the Comstock ledge I'd bet myself ag'in a Lander Hill razor-blade that them durned Black Republicans don't get away with the enscon election."—Austin (New) Reveille.

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN

MONTREAL, July 15.—Louis Durrocher, about thirty years of age, living at Point aux Trembles, has died under the following circumstances. Durrocher was working at River des Prairies, and on the 13th instant left the shanty to pay a visit to his father. The day turned out a stormy one, so fierce as to completely bewilder the man, causing him to lose his way. He wandered about till he became worn out, at the same time suffering hunger and thirst. In this condition he was found the following morning by some men, one of whom was his cousin and the other a friend. On seeing these two coming towards him, and after stating that he was dying of hunger, he requested them to procure him food, offering money at the same time. The young men refused and left him there, and did not notify his father. In the meantime, Louis scarcely breathing, owing to his sufferings, fell into a sleep, upon awakening from which he became delirious, and in his agony fractured his skull in several places. About 8 o'clock that night, he was found bathed

The war between Turkey and her rebellious provinces has assumed dangerous proportions. The Servians were the aggressors and crossed into Turkey with a considerable force, but thus far the fighting has been in favor of the Turks. The most barbarous atrocities are practiced on both sides, and though the great powers of Europe have agreed to observe a strict neutrality, the probability is that they will be drawn into the conflict, unless the difficulty be soon settled. The Turks have employed Circassians to lay waste the country of the insurgents by burning villages, destroying property and even murdering men, women and children. They also bring Christian women and children before the army during a battle and have them exposed to the enemy's bullets. This is done with the intention of diverting the fury of the Servians and giving themselves an advantage. The Servians and other insurgents being mostly Christians they would naturally object to firing upon defenceless members of their own faith, if aware of their presence in the Turkish trenches. Lord Derby has repeatedly assured the British people that non-intervention is the policy of the Government, and other powers seem equally as determined to keep out of the war.

THE HEATED TERM.

For two weeks we have been experiencing a degree of heat scarcely before equalled in this country. Certainly not for many years, or in the recollection of that infallible authority, "the oldest inhabitant," has such a protracted term prevailed. As might be expected the casualties have been many, and in other ways the effects are felt to the detriment of health and comfort. Much of our inconvenience is undoubtedly due to our own wilful disobedience of the laws of nature and common sense. The dietary habits of our people do not sufficiently change from the arctic cold of mid-winter to the almost tropical heat of mid-summer. Too much animal food is consumed and too little of the more cooling, life-sustaining vegetable diet. We get into the habit of using a certain routine of dishes and find it hard to break away. But perhaps more danger to human life, during the hot weather, is found in the thoughtless disregard for sanitary rules that govern so many people while bathing. Nothing is more desirable and indeed necessary, when the therm-instance, with skirts of bottle green velvet he makes over dresses of soft thick tartan silk. The over dress has a Breton basque with velvet vest fastened up by pearl buttons and trimmed with a jabot of lace. The black and white shepherd's-plaid is also made up over green or blue velvet skirts, and the material is cut in such a way that all the breadths are bias, making the checks seem elongated. The trimming is a vest, cuffs, collar, pocket, and wide bias bands of velvet, like that of the skirt.

The princesse dress so popular with Parisians this season is merely an elongation of the princesse polonaise in Bazar No. 4, Vol. IX.; it also resembles the princesse dress now worn by little girls, and for this reason it is called in France the Babe dress. It is made of summer silks and of fine woollen fabrics. The back has the heavy kilt-pleating, and its plainness is relieved by a wide sash which passes low around the hips, with a chatelaine bag pendent on the right side. Sometimes Worth buttons this dress behind, and makes it fit the figure as if it were moulded in it—a very pretty fashion for young ladies with well rounded figures. For those who are too slight the waist is made double breasted.

Among other tasteful dresses worn at the summer resorts are those of dark stuffs trimmed with white English embroidery. Seal brown, navy blue, and invisible green, foulards and sponges are very effective when trimmed with wrought ruffles and white muslin; and the same colors are chosen in summer camel's hair and relieved by these white frills. A handsome dress worn at Newport has a skirt of black velvet with one deep gathered flounce. Above this is a long deep round over-skirt of navy blue foulard of solid color, but picked out in tiny amure designs, and edged with a white cambric ruffle three inches wide, and entirely covered with open-worked stars. The basque of blue foulard slopes away in front to show a velvet press, and is edged with a white frill. The Gainsborough hat is of white chip, with blue facing on the turned up brim, and a cluster of white daisies stuck on the left side; a scarf of blue foulard is twined around the crown, and a long, white ostrich plume sweeps over it. The jewelry is sometimes of the finest filigree silver, and again a set of lapis lazuli is worn with it. The parasol is a large English shape, covered with blue Venetian silk, and a handle of carved ivory.

Many sea-side dresses that will be worn all through mid-summer have not only lower skirts of velvet, but sleeves also; indeed, these velvet accessories have superseded silk among leaders of fashion. In a summer outfit, a sensible plan, and one that gives variety, is to have two or three sleeveless over dresses that may be worn with the expensive skirt and sleeves of velvet. Thus for an afternoon costume for driving, the sleeves and skirt of black velvet are worn with a sleeveless polonaise of velvet-striped grenadine, richly trimmed with thread lace; while for dinner and evening entertainments the same sleeves and skirts are used with a basque and long round over-skirt of pale blue damask silk, edged with fringe and caught up with velvet loops; or else the over kept for the special use of stiffs." The "stiff" poured out a glassful of the stuff, emptied it into his throat, and when he got through coughing and wiping his eyes on his coat-sleeve, said: "I aint got no money; but if I was the Comstock ledge I'd bet myself ag'in a Lander Hill razor-blade that them durned Black Republicans don't get away with the ensain' election."—Austin (Nev) Reveille.

In the meantime, Louis scarcely breathing, owing to his sufferings, fell into a sleep, upon awakening from which he became delirious, and in his agony fractured his skull in several places. About 8 o'clock that night, he was found bathed in blood by the individuals who had so cruelly left him in the morning. They ran to old Mr. Durrocher's to tell him about his son, and on reaching the place he found his son a corpse. The young men were severely censured by the coroner, who held an inquest. More than a rebuke should be administered to people guilty of such inhumanity.

UMBRELLA STEALING.—Let no one longer say that stealing an umbrella is not a crime. An English justice has established the precedent, and henceforth let all transgressors beware. There are several strange features about the case. One was that already mentioned. The theft was of an umbrella, and stranger still, the thief was "a lady bore." The case occurred at Hammersmith, England. Even the fact that rain began to fall while she was waiting in the shop whence the umbrella was stolen, and that the kleptomaniac fully intended to have returned it, the article being a nice silk one, failed to act as mitigating circumstances. Justice was inexorable and would not even let the lady go on her own recognizance, but through the voice of the magistrate imposed a sentence of fourteen days' imprisonment with hard labor. "Hard labor!" exclaimed the prisoner with surprise, and the court curtly responded, "Yes."

THE "ALBION" UP AGAIN.

Two weeks ago we mentioned that Messrs. Waggoner & McMillan had bought Mr. Wm. Martin's fine large residence on the corner of Queen and Montreal streets, with the stone dwelling house adjoining, and converted the two buildings into one, to supply the place of their burnt Albion Hotel. They have made some alterations, and now for its size possess the snugest little hotel in the Province. On Saturday night it was the stopping place of nearly 20 commercial gentlemen who arrived that day, who were pleased to find the old attention on the part of the landlords and a pleasanter outlook than before—that on Queen street. Messrs. Waggoner & McMillan had preserved part of their driving sheds and stables from the fire, and have already erected new ones in addition, besides which they to-day bought from Mr. M. Dolan part of his large lot adjoining to afford more yard room. The yards and stables connect as well, if not better, with the new house than with the old one, lying as they do between the two sites. The outbuildings have brick fronts. The Albion will be at once extended on Montreal street, by a large building. There is push about the Albion men.—Whig.

"ARMENIA."—This is the name of a new steamer which is to run between Kingston and Picton daily, leaving Kingston in the morning and returning in the evening. She has an elegantly fitted up cabin and a large room deck and will make an excellent excursion boat. She is owned by D. & W.

FREE THOUGHT.—The celebrated B. F. Underwood is announced for this and tomorrow evenings at the Music Hall. In the event of an English Church clergyman not appearing in debate with him, he will lecture. The admission is free.

THE TWELFTH IN CENTREVILLE.—The Orange celebration in Centreville on the 12th was a great success, from all we can learn. There was between 500 and 1,000 in the procession, and the village was full of spectators. It was a fine day, and a good time was spent.

NOT SETTLED.—Up to the time of our going to press we have not heard of any verdict being arrived at in the case of the young man Flynn killed by the cars at Collins Bay. The general opinion, however, is that the company will be freed from blame.

ANOTHER FINE.—The charge made against John Bowie, of the Napanee Brewery, of having sold beer in small quantities, has at last been proven. The case was before C. James and M. Neville, Esqs. J. P's., on Friday last, when it was proven beer had been sold by an employee on Dominion Day. Fined $20 and costs.

THE "PIONEER."—It is expected the "Pioneer" will be able to start on a cruise early next week. She is now nearly fitted up, the mainmast and bowsprit having been placed in her. The work of rigging is being hurried on by the Messrs. Dickens. Please may we go?

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—On Monday as Mr. Driver, a farmer living upon the Indian Reserve in Tyendinaga, was on his way home from Shannonville with a load of flour, he fell from the waggon when about a mile from the village, the wheels passing diagonally over his body, crushing one of his shoulders and breaking some of his ribs, from the effect of which death ensued on Thursday evening. Whiskey was the cause.

PROFLIGACY.—Two young girls, named Rachel Babcock, and Annie Barnhart, of Belleville, were brought before C. James Esq., J. P., on Friday last, on a charge of being frequenters of a house of ill fame. The charge was made by the mother of the latter, who in addition charged Rachel with having enticed her daughter from her home in Belleville. Rachel was given 15 minutes to leave town, and after a good deal of persuasion, with a prospect of gaol before her, Annie returned home with her mother.

TRADE PROSPECTS.—We are in receipt of a very lengthy document published by John McKillop & Co's. Commercial DIVIDEND.—The Dominion Telegraph Company announce an interim dividend of three per cent. for the half year ending 30th June. The business of the company would have warranted the payment of three and a half per cent., but giving due consideration to the depressed state of commerce generally, the Directors have discreetly determined to await the result of the entire year, when they hope to make up the usual dividend of seven per annum.

PRENTICE BOYS.—At a meeting of Schomberg Lodge No 3, Prentice Boys, held in their hall on Friday night of last week, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

Bro N. Paisley, W. M.
" J. C. Smith, D. M.
" M. Richardson, R. S.
" Geo. Challes, A. R. S.
" Geo. Kimmerly, Treas.
" C. G. Ham, O. T.
" Wm. Madden, F. C.

The Belleville lodge intend holding a picnic, to celebrate the closing of the Gates of Derry, on the 12th August, at which it is expected Napanee and Kingston will take part.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT.—We are indebted to the Provincial and Western Insurance Companies for their prompt settlement of our loss by fire, which occurred on the 10th inst. In the case of one of the companies, the check for the money was in our hands on the Saturday following, and the other a couple of days later. We are pleased to know ours is not an exceptional case, but that all losses are settled by both these companies with the same promptness. We, therefore, cheerfully recommend them to the public generally. W. V. Detlor, Esq., is the Agent for both companies in Napanee.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—An accident which for some time threatened to be fatal, occurred to Mr. H. P. Lowry, an employee of J. Gibbard & Son, on Saturday evening, 8th inst. Mr. Lowry was engaged in sawing some lumber on a small circular saw, and in taking back a piece of board to saw it through again, it caught on the saw, and, notwithstanding a firm grip was held of it, was forced against the pit of his stomach. He was knocked senseless, and almost doubled up. Dr. Ruttan was sent for, but as there were no external wounds he could do no more than give him quieting medicines. He was soon after removed to his home, and, with close attention, we are pleased to know is rapidly recovering.

LOGIC.—One healthy bug will convince a potato plant that life is all a fleeting show. But one dose of Paris Green, on the other hand, will secure the average, and restore confidence to the plant by convincing that bug that there is nothing certain but death.

SOLILOQUY.—Now is the time for lovers to get spooney over ice cream, she taking a few pretty dabs at his vanilla, and he borrowing a taste of her chocolate. This process inspires confidence in the day when they will be throwing corned beef and cabbage across the table.

"ARMENIA."—This is the name of a new steamer which is to run between Kingston and Picton daily, leaving Kingston in the morning and returning in the evening. She has an elegantly fitted up cabin and a large room deck and will make an excellent excursion boat. She is owned by D. & W. McMurchy of Picton.

Cheese and butter manufacturers should bear in mind that none but persons in good health should have charge of a dairy room, for well-authenticated cases have been published in which scarlatina, measles, and other infectious diseases have been conveyed through the virus absorbed by milk manipulated by persons not fully recovered from such diseases.

OFF TO KINGSTON.—In accordance with a motion of the Council to that effect, the Deputy Reeve of the town, and the Chief of Police, took an invalid pauper named Murphy to the Kingston General Hospital on Thursday, 6th inst. They were informed the man had been there before, but stole away. He will not get away again until he is either killed or cured. There is good hopes of his recovery.

THE FIREMEN'S DEMONSTRATION.—Owing to so few of the invitations which were sent out having been responded to, the demonstration which was to have taken place on Thursday, 3rd August, has been postponed till the 31st. Printed invitations have been sent out by the Chief Engineer, and if enough companies respond it will then be held, if not, it will be postponed for another year.

TRADE PROSPECTS.—We are in receipt of a very lengthy document published by John McKillop & Co's. Commercial Agency, Montreal, giving some idea as to crop prospects throughout the Dominion. The paper is got up for presentation to the friends of the agency in the Dominion, and is intended to act as a guide to tradesmen assisting them in the formation of a business policy for the coming fall. The information has been obtained by agents sent out for that purpose. In summing up the whole they say "we may safely conclude that the harvest promises to be of unusual yield."

THE "NATIONAL."—This Toronto weekly, which went down with the Sun, has come safely out of the trials and troubles which caused its suspension, and reappears as an advocate of "Canada First" principles. It is of course neutral as between the two great political parties, and deals out sharp raps at each with notable impartiality. The editorial articles are cleverly written, the selections are made with good taste, and the paper is worthy the support of the class whose opinions it ably represents.

"CLIFF'S MONTHLY JOURNAL."—We have received the first number of this new publication, devoted to Music and general Miscellany, and readily express our appreciation of its merits. It contains sixteen pages, nine of which are devoted to music, and the remainder to miscellany and advertisements. The musical selections are of a high order, and must be popular with the public, more especially young ladies who wish to practice the best authors. The price of this Monthly is only 75 cts. Published by W. W. Cliff, Esq., Carleton Place.

VAN AMBURGH'S SHOW.—The performances of this old and favorite show here on the 11th inst., were not as well attended as they have been in former years. One cause, however, of the slim audiences was the rain storm which ushered in the day. The show itself was not one whit behind what it was formerly, but still retains its old reputation. The animals in the menagerie are all of the usual kind seen there, but very good specimens. A first-class circus has been added to the concern since its last tour through Canada, which is an additional attraction. Many features of it make it the best show we have seen for some time.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—An accident of a most painful nature occurred to a little son of R. S. Chatterson's on Sunday 9th inst., which has proved fatal. It appears that Mrs. Chatterson had been giving the little fellow, the kernel of some prune pits to eat, and by some means he swallowed a piece of the shell, which stuck in his wind pipe, and stopped up the passage. Surgical aid was called in, but all their efforts proved futile to extricate the pit or alleviate the poor little fellows suffering. He lived for about 24 hours in the most intense agony, when his little spirit was wafted away to the realms of bliss. He was but 18 months old, and was said by all who knew him to be a very bright, smart child. We heartily sympathize with the parents in their bereavement.

UNIQUE AND USEFUL.—Pedestrians on West Dundas St. these warm evenings have observed Councillor Spencer

manipulated by persons not fully recovered from such diseases.

ACCIDENT.—As Mrs. Wm. Dryden was coming down town from her residence on Thursday of last week, and when a little above the residence of Mr. Allen Fraser, on John Street, she stumbled into a hole in the side-walk, and fell with such force as to break her collar bone. She was assisted to her home, where medical aid was summoned, and her wounds dressed. And now, perhaps, our city fathers will do something with the plank walks, when they find an action for damages on their hands.

ACCIDENT.—We regret to notice our friend C. W. Huffman, Esq., Deputy Reeve of Ernesttown, had his right shoulder badly injured on Saturday morning last. It appears he had been harnessing a horse, and had taken him as far as the door, when the animal jumped away, and threw Mr. H. violently against a post. He was knocked insensible for a time, but soon rallied. As his bruises are not very serious, however, he will soon be around as usual.

ENLARGING.—No better evidence of success can be noted than the frequent enlargements Mr. S. McLaughlin has been called upon to make in his place of business. We are pleased to note his prosperity, as we believe him to be an enterprising citizen, and one worthy of encouragement. He is now, in addition to the fruit and grocery business, a large importer of fresh fish,—which is certainly a boon to the town. Give Sam a call opposite to the Tichborne House, you will be sure to find just what you want.

BATHING.—Some steps ought to be taken by the authorities to prevent bathing during the day time along the harbor. Almost every day scores of little boys, and big ones too, may be seen going in in almost any part of the river. A splendid place has been prepared by Jasper Snider, where old or young can bathe to their heart's content. His place is so constructed as to suit either the swimmer or one who cannot swim. It is open both day and night, and the cost of a bath is only 10 cents. Jasper has gone to a considerable expense in fitting up his bathing house, and should be encouraged.

RESIGNED.—We regret exceedingly to have to announce that our very worthy and much esteemed principal of the High School here, John Campbell, Esq., M. A., has tendered his resignation to the Board of School Trustees. Mr. Campbell's duties here being very arduous, and the salary considerably below what it should have been, he felt himself at liberty to do better should an opportunity offer. Such a chance was not long in presenting itself, as without application, he has been appointed Classical Master of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, by the Provincial School Inspector. This, we are sure, will be sad news to many of the pupils who have been under Mr. Campbell's tuition, some of them for years, and we fear his place will not be easily supplied. Peterborough is fortunate in having secured his services. There are few better teachers to be found in the Province.

UNIQUE AND USEFUL.—Pedestrians on West Dundas St. these warm evenings have observed Councillor Spencer exercising his muscle and looking refreshingly cool amidst falling water, flowers and shade trees. The machinery by means of which he makes such an interesting display consists of one of McMartin's double action force pumps, placed in a well supplied with an abundance of water, and having forty or fifty feet of rubber hose attached to the spout. One man or a strong boy can easily force through this hose of half inch nozzle, a stream of water with sufficient force to be thrown over Mr. Spencer's residence. In addition to answering an excellent purpose for watering the grounds it can be used with good effect, in case of fire. It is, indeed, unique and useful.

A NUISANCE.—On Tuesday morning last Mrs. Hearn was tried before His Worship the Mayor, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. The complaint was laid by Alex. Babcock, who lives in the same house with Mrs. Hearn. The case occupied the Court nearly the entire morning, there being several witnesses on both sides. Mrs. Hearn was her own counsel in the trial, and defended herself bravely, so much so as to fasten a conviction upon the complainant. She was fined $5, and $3.95 costs. A charge against Betty Hearn was dismissed, and Alex. Babcock was fined $2 and $3.20 costs, for using insulting language. The neighborhood where these people live has been greatly annoyed for a long time by rowdies congregating in and around the premises, and often using most obscene language.

FIRE IN THE EXPRESS OFFICE.

On Monday night, the 10th inst., the fire fiend visited our office, and but for the timely arrival of a number of friends, the building, together with those adjoining, must have been reduced to ashes. It was first discovered about 11:30 p.m., by some gentlemen in the Billiard Room adjoining, in the north-west corner of the office, by the flames darting out from the window. Hurrying up stairs, the door was forced open, when the room was found to be filled with flame and smoke, so that it was with great difficulty and danger to themselves, the fire was reached. The alarm was soon given, and the engine was got out quickly and on the spot. Previous to its coming, however, pails were secured, and with water from the cistern in the press room, the flames were soon got under control, but not before a large quantity of type had been destroyed. There still being a dense smoke in the room, the hose was brought up stairs, and the steamer commenced to play upon the fire, and in a very short time had it subdued.

How the fire could have originated is to us a mystery, as, when the office was closed for the night everything was apparently safe. There had been no fire in the building for a long time before it, and smoking is not allowed in the premises in working hours.

Of the extent of our loss it is as yet a hard matter to form an estimate, as we had a large quantity of material in the corner where the fire took place. In addition to all this there is the damage by water, and the suspension of work, loss of manuscripts, &c., and many other inconveniences we have been put to.

In consequence of our misfortune we were unable to publish last week, and this week present our paper in a very imperfect form, part of it having been printed for last week. We are now, however, fitted up again, and hope to be able next week to go on as before.

Fortunately for us, the stock, as well as the building, was insured, though not to such an extent as to cover more than one-half our loss had the building been destroyed. There was $2,500 insurance on the material, &c., in the office, divided between two companies, as follows:—In the Western, $1,500, and in the Provincial, $1,000. The facts being at once telegraphed to these companies, their inspectors were sent on, and within an incredibly short time after the fire, the loss was adjusted to our mutual satisfaction.

ICE CREAM FESTIVAL.—The Ladies Aid Society of the C. M. Church Selby, purpose having a festival in McKim's Grove, on Saturday next, at 1 p. m. A lecture will also be given by Rev. W. V. Sexsmith, of British Columbia, on that country. Admission 25 cents.

PHOTOGRAPHY.—We recently paid a visit to the photographic studio of Mr. J. S. Hulett here, which well repaid our pains. He has hung around his gallery some very beautiful life-size pictures, mostly of our citizens. On examination, however, we found he has work in from all parts of the Province, his pictures in every case giving satisfaction. With his beautiful and costly solar instrument, and the services of a first class artist, such as he now has, his work cannot be excelled anywhere. All in want of anything in the photographic line will do well to give him a call.

We and Our Neighbors.

BY HARRIET BEECHER STOWE

AUTHOR OF "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN," ETC., ETC.

Mrs. Betsey tell into Dinah's arms, and cried on her shoulder, declaring that she couldn't take a cent of her money, and that they were all ruined, and fell into what Dinah used to call one of her "bad spells." So she swept her up in her arms forthwith and carried her up-stairs and put her to bed, amid furious dissentient barking from Jack, who seemed to consider it his duty to express an opinion in the matter.

"Dar now, ye aggravatin' critter, lie down and shet up," she said to Jack, as she lifted him on the bed and saw him cuddle down in Mrs. Betsey's arms and lay his rough cheek against hers.

Dinah remembered, years before, her young mistress lying weak and faint on that same spot, and how there had been the soft head of a baby lying where Jack's rough head was now nestling, and her heart swelled within her.

"Now then," she said, pouring out some drops and giving them to her, "you jest hush up and go to sleep, honey. Miss Dorcas and I, we'll fix up this 'ere. It'll all come straight—now you'll see it will. Why, de Lord ain't gwine to let you starve. Never see de righteous forsaken. Jest go to sleep honey, and it'll be all right when you wake up."

Meanwhile, Miss Dorcas had gone across the way to consult with Eva. The opening of the friendship on the opposite side of the way had been a relief to her from the desolateness and loneliness of her life circle, and she had come to that degree of friendly reliance that she felt she could state her dilemma and ask advice.

"I don't see any way but I must come to selling the house at last," said Miss Dorcas; "but I don't know how to set about it; and if we have to leave, at our age, life won't seem worth having. I'm afraid it would kill Betsey."

"Dear Miss Dorcas, we can't afford to loose you," said Eva. "You don't gentility that made them attractive; and her artist imagination at once went into the work of brightening up their tarnished and dusky respectability with a nice little modern addition of pictures and flowers, and new bits of furniture here and there.

Just as she returned from her survey, she found Jim in her own parlor, wity a thriving pot of ivy.

"Well, here's one for our parlor window, when we find one," said he. "I'm a boy that gets things when I see them. Now you don't often see an ivy so thrifty as this, and I've brought it to you to take care of till I find the room!"

"Jim," said Eva, "I believe what you want is to be found right across the way from us, so that we can talk across from your windows to ours."

"What! the old Vanderheyden house? Thunder!" said Jim.

Now, Jim was one of the class of boys who make free use of "thunder" in conversation, without meaning to express more by it than a state of slight surprise.

"What's up now?" he added. "I should as soon expect Queen Victoria to rent Buckingham Palace as that the old ladies across the way would come to letting rooms!"

"Necessity has no law, Jim." And then Eva told him Miss Dorcas's misfortune.

"Poor old girls!" said Jim. "I do declare it's too thundering bad. I'll go right over and rent the room; and I'll pay up square, too, and no mistake."

"Shall I go with you?"

"Oh, you just leave that to me. Two are all that are needed in a bargain."

In a few minutes, Jim was at his ease in front of Miss Dorcas saying:

"Miss Dorcas, the fact is I want to hire a suit of rooms. You see, I'm going to have a wife before long, and nothing will suit her so well as this neighborhood. Now, if you will only rent us half of your house, we shall be have so beautifully that you never will be sorry that you took us in."

Miss Dorcas apologized for the rooms and furniture. They were old, she knew—not in modern style—but such as they were, would he just go through them? and Jim made the course with her. And the short of the matter was, that the bargain was soon struck.

Jim stated frankly the sum he felt able to pay for apartments; to Miss

A snicker from the adjacent china-closet, where Dinah was listening, confirmed this statement.

"Why, it's such a nice thing. Why, there's no end to it," said Mrs. Betsey, whose cheerfulness increased with reflection. "A real live man in the house!—and a young man, too!—and such a one; and dear Miss Alice—why only think, bringing all her wedding clothes to the house, and I don't doubt she'll show them all to me—and it'll be so nice for Jack! won't it, Jack?"

Jack barked his assent vigorously, and a second explosive chuckle from the china closet betrayed Dinah's profound sympathy. The faithful creature was rolling and boiling in the waves of triumphant merriment behind the scenes. The conversation of her mistress in fact appeared to be a daily source of amusement to her, and Miss Dorcas was forced to wink at this espionage, in consideration of Dinah's limited sources of entertainment, and generally pretended not to know that she was there.

On the present occasion, Dinah's contribution to the interview was too evident to be ignored, but Miss Dorcas listened to it with indulgence. A good prospect of regular income does, after all, strengthen one's faith in Providence, and dispose one to be easily satisfied with one's fellows.

EVA TO HARRY'S MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: You've no idea how things have gone on within a short time. I have been so excited and so busy, and kept in such a state of constant consultation, for this past week, that I have had no time to keep up my bulletins to you.

Well, dear mother, it is at last concluded that we are to have two weddings on one day, the second week after Easter, when Alice is to be married to Jim Fellows, and Angie to Mr. St. John.

Easter comes this year about the latest that it ever does, so that we may hope for sunny spring weather, and at least a few crocuses and hyacinths in the borders, as good omens for the future. I wish you could choose this time to make your long-promised visit and see how gay and festive we all are. Just now, every one is overwhelmed with business, and the days go off very

"Dear Miss Dorcas, we can't afford to loose you," said Eva. "You don't know what a comfort it is to have you over there, so nice and handy—why, it would be forlorn to have you go; it would break us all up!"

"You are kind to say so," said Miss Dorcas; "but I can't help feeling that the gain of our being there is all on one side."

"But, dear Miss Dorcas, why need you move? See here. A bright thought strikes me. Your house is so large! Why couldn't you rent half of it? You really don't need it all; and I'm sure it could be easily arranged for two families. Do think of that, please."

"If it could be done—if anybody would want it!" said Miss Dorcas.

"Oh, just let us go over this minute and see," said Eva, as she threw a light cloud of worsted over her head, and seizing Miss Dorcas by the arm, crossed back with her, talking cheerfully.

"Here you have it, nice as possible. Your front parlour—you never sit there; and it's only a care to have a room you don't use. And then this great empty office back here—a dining-room all ready! and there is a back shed that could have a cooking stove, and be fitted into kitchen. Why, the thing is perfect; and there's your income without moving a peg! See what it

"There, now—we're anchored, I think. The old folks and Aunt Maria have been wanting me to marry and live with them in the old hive, but Jim doesn't put his foot into that trap, if he knows it. My wife and I must have our own establishment, if it's only in two rooms. Now it's all settled, if Allie likes it, and I know she will. By George, it's a lucky hit! That parlor will brighten up capitally."

"You know, old furniture is all the rage now," said Eva, "and you can buy things here and there as you want."

"Yes," said Jim; "you know I did buy a pair of brass andirons when I was going to ask Allie to have me, and they'll be just the thing for the old fireplace over there. Miss Dorcas apologised for the want of those that belonged there, by saying that her brother had taken them apart to try some experiment in brass polishing, and never found time to put them together again, and so parts of them got lost. Well, dear mother, it is at last concluded that we are to have two weddings on one day, the second week after Easter, when Alice is to be married to Jim Fellows, and Angie to Mr. St. John.

Easter comes this year about the latest that it ever does, so that we may hope for sunny spring weather, and at least a few crocuses and hyacinths in the borders, as good omens for the future. I wish you could choose this time to make your long-promised visit and see how gay and festive we all are. Just now, every one is overwhelmed with business, and the days go off very fast.

Aunt Maria is in her glory, as generalissimo of the forces and dictator of all things. It is for just such crises that she was born; she has now fairly enough to manage to keep her contented with everybody, and everybody contented with her—which, by-the-bye, is not always the case in her history.

It is decreed that the wedding is to be a morning one, in Mr. St. John's little chapel; and that, after the reception at mamma's, Jim will start with Alice to visit his family friends, and Angie and St. John will go immediately on the steamer to sail for Europe, where they will spend the summer in travelling and be back again in autumn. Meanwhile, they have engaged a house in that part of the city where their mission work lies, and of course, like curs, it is on an unfashionable street—a thing which grieves Aunt Maria, who takes every occasion to say that Mr. St. John, being a man of independent fortune, is entitled to live genteelly. I am glad, because they are within an easy distance of us, which will be nice. Aunt Maria and mamma are to see to getting the house all ready for them to go into when they return.

Bolton is going over with them, to visit Paris! The fact is, since I open-

And then this great empty office back here—a dining-room all ready! and there is a back shed that could have a cooking stove, and be fitted into kitchen. Why, the thing is perfect; and there's your income without moving a peg! See what it is to have real estate!"

"You are very sanguine," said Miss Dorcas, looking a little brightened herself. "I have often thought myself that the house is a great deal larger than we need; but I am quite helpless about such matters. We are so out of the world. I know nothing of business; real estate agents are my horror; and I have no man to advise me."

"Oh, Miss Dorcas, wait now till I consult Harry. I'm sure something nice could be arranged."

"I dare say," said Mrs. Dorcas, "if these rooms were in a fashionable quarter we might let them; but the world has long since left our house in the rear."

"Never mind that," said Eva. "You see we don't mind fashion, and there may be neighbors as good as we, of the same mind."

Eva already had one of her visions in her head; but of this she did not speak to Miss Dorcas till she had matured it.

She knew that Jim Fellows had been for weeks on the keen chase after apartments, and that none yet had presented themselves as altogether eligible. Alice had insisted on an economical beginning, and the utmost prudence as to price; and the result had been, what is usual in such cases, that all the rooms that would do at all were too dear.

Eva saw at once in this suit of rooms, right across the way from them, the very thing they were in search of. The rooms were large and sunny, with a quaint, old-fashioned air of by-gone times. I put this room into that way, it knows it. My wife and I must have our own establishment, if it's only in two rooms. Now it's all settled, if Allie likes it, and I know she will. By George, it's a lucky hit! That parlor will brighten up capitally."

"You know, old furniture is all the rage now," said Eva, "and you can buy things here and there as you want."

"Yes," said Jim; "you know I did buy a pair of brass andirons when I was going to ask Allie to have me, and they'll be just the thing for the old fireplace over there. Miss Dorcas apologised for the want of those that belonged there, by saying that her brother had taken them apart to try some experiment in brass polishing, and never found time to put them together again, and so parts of them got lost. I told her it was a special providence that I happened to have the very pair that were needed there; and there's a splendid sunny window for the ivies on the south corner!"

"That old furniture is lovely," said Eva. "It's like a dark, rich background to a picture. All your little bright modern things will show so well over it."

"Well, I'm going to bring Allie down to go over it, this minute," said Jim, who was not of the class to allow the grass to grow under their feet.

Meanwhile, when Mrs. Betsey came down to dinner, she found the storm over, and clear, shining after rain.

"What, Mr. Fellows!" she exclaimed; "that dear, good young man that was so kind to Jack! Why, Dorcas, what a providence! I'm sure it'll be a mercy to have a man in the house once more!"

"Why, I'm sure," said Miss Dorcas, "your great fear that you wake me up every night about, is that there is a man in the house!"

"Oh, well," said Mrs. Betsey, laughing cheerfully; "you know what I mean. I mean the right kind of a man. I've thought that those dreadful burglars and creatures that break into houses where there's old silver must find us out—because, Dorcas, really, that hat that we keep on the entry table is so big and dusty, and so different from what they wear now, they must know that no man wears a hat like that. I've always told Dinah that—she knows I have, more than twenty times."

be a morning one, in Mr. St. John's little chapel; and that, after the reception at mamma's, Jim will start with Alice to visit his family friends, and Angie and St. John will go immediately on the steamer to sail for Europe, where they will spend the summer in travelling and be back again in autumn. I am glad, because they are within an easy distance of us, which will be nice. Aunt Maria and mamma are to see to getting the house all ready for them to go into when they return.

Bolton is going over with them, to visit Paris! The fact is, since I opened communication between him and Caroline, her letters to me have grown short and infrequent, and her letters to him long and constant, and the effect on him has been magical. I have never seen him in such good spirits. Those turns of morbid depression that he used to have, seem to be fading away gradually. He has been with us so much that I feel almost as if he were a member of our family, and I cannot but feel that our home has been a shelter and a strength to him. What would it be to have a happy one of his own? I am sure he deserves it, if ever kindness, unselfishness, and true nobleness of heart deserved it; and I am sure that Caroline is wise enough and strong enough to give him just the support that he needs.

Then there's Alice's engagement to Jim. I have long foreseen to what her friendship for him would grow, and though she had many hesitations, yet now she is perfectly happy in it; and only think how nice it is! They are to take half the old Vanderheyden house, opposite to us, so that we can see the lights of each other's hearths across from each other's windows.

Mother, doesn't it seem as if our bright, cosy, happy, free-and-easy home was throwing out as many side-shoots as a lilac bush?

Just think; in easy vicinity, we shall have Jim and Alice, Angie and St. John, and, as I believe, Bolton and Caroline. We shall be a guild of householders, who hold the same traditions, walk by the same rule, and true

And it is not merely having good times either; but mother, the more I think of it, the more I think the making of bright, happy homes, is the best way of helping on the world that has been discovered yet. A home is a thing that can't be for one's own self alone—at least the kind of home we are thinking of; it reaches out on all sides and helps and shelters and comforts others. Even my little experiment of a few months ago shows me that; and I know that Angie's and St. John's home will be even more so than ours. Angie was born to be a rector's wife; to have a kind word and a kind smile, and a good deed for everybody, to love everybody dearly, and keep ever bright and in good spirits. It is amazing to see the change she has wrought in St. John. He was fast getting into a sort of stringent, morbid asceticism; now he is so gracious, so genial, and so entertaining—he is like a rock, in June, all bursting out with anemones and columbines in every rift.

As to Jim and Alice, you ought to see how happy they are in consulting me about the arrangements of their future home in the Vanderheyden House. And the best of it is, to see how perfectly delighted the two old ladies are to have them there. You must know that there was a sudden failure in Miss Dorcas's income which would have made it necessary to sell the house had it not been for just this arrangement. But they are as gracious and kind about it as if they were about to receive guests; and every improvement and every additional touch of brightness to the rooms seems to please them as much as if they were going to be married themselves.

Miss Dorcas said to me that our coming to live in their neighbourhood had been the greatest blessing to them that ever had happened for years—that it had opened a new life to them.

As to Maggie, dear mother, she is becoming a real comfort to me. I do think that all the poor girls sorrows and sufferings have not been in vain, and that she is now a true and humble Christian.

She has been very useful in this sudden hurry of work that has fallen upon us, and seems really delighted to be so.

more of two! So Aunt Maria stepped at once into command by acclamation, and addressed herself to her work as a strong man to run a race; and win! Angie and St. John spent blissful hours in the back parlour, and Jim and Alice monopolised the library. Aunt Maria flew all over New York, and arranged about all the towels and table-cloths and napkins and doilies, down to the very dish cloths. She overlooked armies of sewing women, milliners and mantua-makers—the most slippery of all mortal creatures—and drove them all up to have each her quota in time. She with Mrs. Van Arsdel, made lists of people to be invited, and busied herself with getting samples and terms from fancy stationers for the wedding cards. She planned in advance all the details of the wedding feast, and engaged the cake and fruit and ice cream.

Nor did she forget the social and society exigencies of the crisis.

She found time, dressed in her best, to take Mr. Van Arsdel in full panoply to return the call of Mrs. Dr. Gracey, who had come, promptly and properly, with the doctor, to recognise Miss Angelique and felicitate about the engagement of their nephew.

She arranged for a dinner party to be given by Mrs. Van Arsdel, where the doctor and his lady were to be received into family alliance, and testimonies of high consideration accorded to them. Aunt Maria took occasion, in private converse with Mrs. Dr. Gracey, to assure her of her very great esteem and respect for Mr. St. John, and her perfect conviction that he was on the right road now, and that, though he might possibly burn a few more candles in his chapel, yet, when he came fully under family influence, they would gradually be snuffed out,—intimating that she intended to be aunt, not only to Arthur, but to his chapel and mission-work.

The extraordinary and serene meekness with which that young divine left every question of form and etiquette to her management, and the sort of dazed humility with which he listened to all her rulings about the arrangement of the wedding day, had inspired in Aunt Maria's mind such hopes of his docility as led to these very sanguine anticipations.

It is true that, when it came to the question of renting a house, she found him quietly but unalterably set on a small and modest little mansion in though it must be admitted that Eva was a very difficult person to keep up a long quarrel with.

But just at this hour, when the whole family were at her feet, when it was her voice that decided every question, when she knew where everything was and was to be, and when everything was to be done, she was too well pleased to be unamiable, she was the spirit of the whole affair, and she planned herself joyously when all the callers at the house said to Mrs. Van Arsdel, "Dear me! what would you do if it were not for your sister?" Verily she had her reward.

CHAPTER LII.

EVA'S CONSULTATIONS.

"Now see here," said Jim, coming to Eva as she sat alone in her parlour, "I've got something on my mind I want to talk with you about. You see, Alice and I are to be married at the same time with Angie and St. John."

"Yes, I see it."

"Well, Jim, what makes you think there will be prayer-book with the variations?"

"Oh, well, I attended a ritualistic wedding once, and there was such an amount of processing and chanting, and ancient and modern improvements, that it was just like a show. There were the press reporters elbowing and pushing to get the best places to write it up for the papers, and for my part, I think it's in confounded bad taste, and I couldn't stand it; you know, now, I'm a nervous fellow. If I've got to take part in the exercises, they'll have to 'draw it mild', or Alice and I will have to secede and take it by ourselves. I couldn't go such a thing as that wedding; I never should come out alive."

"Well, Jim, I don't believe there's any reason for apprehension. In the first place, the ceremony, as to its mode and form, always is supposed to be conducted according to the preferences of the bride's family, and we all of us ting into a sort of stringent, morbid scepticism; now he is so gracious, so genial, and so entertaining—he is like a rock, in June, all bursting out with anemones and columbines in every rift.

She has been very useful in this sudden hurry of work that has fallen upon us, and seems really delighted to be so. In our group of families, Maggie will always find friends. Angie wants her to come and live with them when they begin housekeeping, and I think I shall let her go.

I shall never forget the dreadful things I saw the night I went after her. They have sunk deep into my heart; and I hope, mother, I see more clearly the deepest and noblest purpose of life, so as never again to forget it.

But, meantime, a thousand little cares break and futter themselves on my heart, like waves on a rock. Everybody is running to me, every hour. I am consulted, sympathizer and adviser, from the shape of a bow and the positions of trimming; up to the profoundest questions of casuistry. They all talk to me, and I divide my heart among them all, and so the days fly by with frightful rapidity, and I fear I shall get little time to write, so pray come and see for yourself.

She arranged for a dinner party to be given by Mrs. Van Arsdel, where the doctor and his lady were to be received into family alliance, and testimonies of high consideration accorded to them. Aunt Maria took occasion, in private converse with Mrs. Dr. Gracey, to assure her of her very great esteem and respect for Mr. St. John, and her perfect conviction that he was on the right road now, and that, though he might possibly burn a few more candles in his chapel, yet, when he came fully under family influence, they would gradually be snuffed out,—intimating that she intended to be aunt, not only to Arthur, but to his chapel and mission-work.

It is true that, when it came to the question of renting a house, she found him quietly but unalterably set on a small and modest little mansion in the unfashionable neighborhood where his work lay.

"Arthur is going on with his mission," said Angelique, "and I'm going to help him, and we must live where we can do most good"—a reason to which Aunt Maria was just now too busy to reply, but she satisfied herself by discussing at length the wedding affairs with Mrs. Dr. Gracey.

"Of course, Mrs. Gracey," she said, "we all feel that if dear Dr. Gracey is to conduct the wedding services, everything will be in the good old way; there will be nothing objectionable or unusual."

"Oh, you may rely on that, Mrs. Wouwermans," replied the lady. "The doctor is not the man to run after novelties; he's a good old-fashioned Episcopalian. Though he always has been very indulgent to Arthur, he thinks as our dear bishop does, that if young men are left to themselves, and not fettered by opposition, they will gradually outgrow these things."

"Precisely so," said Aunt Maria;

You see, Alice and I are to be married at the same time with Angie and St. John."

"Yes, I see it."

"Well, now, what I want to say is that I really hope there won't be anything longer and harder and more circumlocutory to be got through with on the occasion than just what's in the prayer-book, for that's all I can stand, I can't stand prayer-book with variations, now, I really can't."

"Well, Jim, I don't believe there's any reason for apprehension. In the first place, the ceremony, as to its mode and form, always is supposed to be conducted according to the preferences of the bride's family, and we all of us should be opposed to anything which would draw remark and comment, as being singular and unusual on such an occasion."

"I'm glad to hear that," said Jim.

"And then, Jim, Mr. St. John's uncle, Dr. Gracey, is to perform the ceremony, and he is one of the most respected of the conservative Episcopal clergymen in New York; and it is entirely out of the question to suppose that he would take part in anything of the sort you fear, or which would excite comment as an innovation. Then again, I think Mr. St. John himself has so much natural refinement and just taste that he would not wish his wedding to become a theme for gossip and a gazing stock for the curious."

"Well, I didn't know about St. John. I was a little afraid we should be obliged to do something or other, because they did it in the catacombs, or the Middle Ages, or in Edward the Sixth's time, or some such dodge. I thought I'd just make sure."

CHAPTER LI.

THE HOUR AND THE WOMAN.

It is said that Queen Elizabeth could converse in five languages, and dictate to three secretaries at once, in different tongues, with the greatest ease and composure.

Perhaps it might have been so—let us not quarrel with her laurels; it only shows what woman can do if they set about it, and is not a whit more remarkable than Aunt Maria's triumphant management of all the details of two weddings at one time.

That estimable individual has not, we fear, always appeared to advantage in this history, and it is due to her now to say that nobody that saw her proceedings could help feeling the beauty of the right person in the right place.

Many a person is held to be a pest and a nuisance because there isn't enough to be done to use up his capabilities. Aunt Maria had a passion for superintending and directing, and all that was wanting to bring things right was an occasion when a good deal of superintendence and direction was wanting.

The double wedding in the family just fulfilled all the conditions. It now opened a field to her that everybody was more than thankful to have her occupy.

Lovers, we all know, are, ex-officio, ranked among the incapables; and it, while they were mooning round in the fairy-land of sentiment, some good strong, active, practical head, were not at work upon the details of real life, nothing would be on time at the wedding. Now, if this be true of one wedding, how much with Mrs. Dr. Gracey.

"Of course, Mrs. Gracey," she said, "we all feel that if dear Dr. Gracey is to conduct the wedding services, everything will be in the good old way; there will be nothing objectionable or unusual."

"Oh, you may rely on that, Mrs. Wouvermans," replied the lady. "The doctor is not the man to run after novelties; he's a good old-fashioned Episcopalian. Though he always has been very indulgent to Arthur, he thinks as our dear bishop does, that if young men are left to themselves, and not fettered by opposition, they will gradually outgrow these things."

"Precisely so," said Aunt Maria; "just what I have always thought. For my part I always said that it was safe to trust the bishop."

Did Aunt Maria believe this? She certainly appeared to. She sincerely supposed that this was what she had thought and said, and quite forgot the times she used to wonder "what our bishop could be thinking of, to let things go so."

It was one blessed faculty of this remarkable woman that she generally came to the full conviction of the axiom that "whatever is, is right," and took up and patronized anything that would succeed in spite of her best efforts to prevent it.

So, in announcing the double wedding to her fashionable acquaintance, she placed every thing, as the popular saying is, best foot foremost.

Mr. Fellows was a young man of fine talents, and great industry and elegant manners, a great favourite in society, and likely to take the highest rank in his profession. Alice had refused richer offers—she might perhaps have done better in a worldly point of view, but it was purely a love match, &c., &c. And Mr. St. John, a young man of fine family and independent fortune, who might command all the elegancies of life, was going to live in a distant and obscure quarter, to labor in his work. These facts brought forth, of course, bursts of sympathy and congratulation, and Aunt Maria went off on the top of the wave.

Eva had but done her aunt justice when she told her mother that Aunt Maria would be all the more amiable for the firm stand which the young wife had taken against any interference with her family matters. It was so. Aunt Maria was as balmy to Eva as if that discussion had never taken place, respect of the conservative Episcopal clergymen in New York; and it is entirely out of the question to suppose that he would take part in anything of the sort you fear, or which would excite comment as an innovation. Then again, I think Mr. St. John himself has so much natural refinement and just taste that he would not wish his wedding to become a theme for gossip and a gazing stock for the curious."

"Well, I didn't know about St. John. I was a little afraid we should be obliged to do something or other, because they did it in the catacombs, or the Middle Ages, or in Edward the Sixth's time, or some such dodge. I thought I'd just make sure."

"Well, I think Mr. St. John has gone as far in those directions as he ever will go. He has been living alone up to this winter. He has formed his ideas by himself in solitude. Now he will have another half to himself; he will see in part through the eyes, and feel through the heart, of a sensible and discreet woman—for Angie is that. The society he has met at our house in such men as Dr. Campbell and others, has enlarged his horizon—given him new points of vision—so that I think the too great tendencies he may have had in certain directions have been insensibly checked."

"I wish they may," said Jim, "for he is a good fellow, and so much like one of the primitive Christians that I really want him to get all the credit that belongs to him."

"Oh, well, you'll see, Jim. When a man is so sincere and good, and labours with a good wife to help him, you'll see the difference. But here comes little Mrs. Betsey, Jim. I promised to get her up a cap for the occasion."

"Well, I'm off; only be sure you make matters secure about the ceremony," and off went Jim, and in came little Mrs. Betsey.

"It's good of you, dear Mrs. Henderson, to undertake to make me presentable. You know Dorcas hasn't the least interest in these things. Dorcas is so independent she never cares what the fashion is. Now, she isn't doing a thing to get ready. She's just going in that satin gown that she had made twenty years ago, with a great lace collar as big as a platter; and she sits there just as easy, reading 'Pope's Essay on Man,' and here I'm all in a worry; but I can't help it."

CARE FOR THE BOYS.

Yes, father and mother, it is your boys that need your most thoughtful care! It seems to be instinctive with parents to shield their girls from evil, to keep them out of the sight and sound of sinful things. What mother would rest when evening comes, if her little daughter were at large in the street frequenting the village store, or hanging about the door of the drinking-saloon. How many times is the son of ten years old away from the sight and sound of the mother at nightfall, breathing in a worse malaria than that of stagnant pools from the rude talk of older boys, or of coarse, vulgar men. Outgrow it, will they? Do they? Now and then, a boy poisoned in childhood by vicious associates, does live down the poison and comes out a clean, pure man; but look over any community in search of the young men without guile whose souls and bodies are clean, and are they the sole or the exception? Scrutinize the sisters of these same young men, and do you expect to find the spotless among them, the rule or the exception? It is the curse of the world that its boys are cherished less sacredly than its girls! that their whose temptations and physical vices are strongest have the least done to fortify them against evil. Do not say that because of the difference in their natures, boys and girls cannot be trained by the same standard of morality. It is a base libel upon manhood, fostered so long in the world that it has come almost to be believed. If boys have greater temptations so have they stronger powers when only cultivated. But too often they are wholly neglected. Do not trust to the future to bring your boys out right, for it will almost certainly bring them out scarred! Neither trust to their being above temptation, for the infants of angels and archangels would in their infancy be subject to temptation! Know always where they are, and what they are doing and what are their inmost thoughts; and this, not by a prying, tyrannical oversight of their movements but by such a loving, yearning interest for their well-being, that they love to open

FEMALE EDUCATION.

At the annual distribution of prizes at the Female Normal School, Quebec, on the 26th inst., His Excellency the Governor General was present, and in reply to an address from the pupils, delivered the following sensible address which should be written in golden letters on the walls of every Female Collegiate Institute in Canada:

"We who are anxious about the welfare of our country have great satisfaction in considering that there should exist in the various provinces of Canada such an admirable machinery furnished by these Normal schools for the diffusion of an atmosphere of cheerfulness, elegant purity, and intellectual activity in the homes of the nation. This is especially true as applied to the women teachers of our schools, for it is on them we must depend for the maintenance of a proper standard of good manners, of refinement, and of that high moral tone of which these qualities are the outcome; and I trust you will always remember that the execution of this portion of your functions is not less imperative upon you than are the other branches of your profession. And in relation to this particular part of your duties there is one peculiarity I have observed in this country, though not indigenous but imported, which I think you might use your influence advantageously to correct. I observe that it is an almost universal practice upon this continent, even on public occasions, in prize lists, roll calls, and in the interior of general society, for young ladies to be alluded to by their casual acquaintances, nay, even in the newspapers, by what in the old country we would call their pet name. That is to say, those caressing, soft applications of endearment with which their fathers and mothers, and those who are nearest to them, strive to give expression to the yearning affection they feel for them in the home circle. Now it seems to me to be a monstrous sacrilege, and quite incompatible with the dignity and self-respect due to the daughters of our land, and with the chivalrous reference with which they should be approached, even in thought, that the tender, love-invented nomenclature of the fireside should be bandied about at random in the mouths of every empty-headed Tom, Dick and

MATTER AND MIND.

This formidable array of materialists have it is manifest (in their own opinion) sounded the "depths profound" of the material world, and have, for years past, been intensely engaged in bringing to the surface secrets in regard thereto, as interesting as they are absolutely astounding. They do not, it is true, distinctly give out that mind is matter (at least Professor Tyndal does not), yet is it plainly to be seen that, in their molecular system, they flatter themselves they have discovered the true source and essence of consciousness and cogitation. As we have intimated, however, Mr. Tyndall (the master-spirit of the materialistic clique) has, till now, been exceedingly careful not to commit himself outright to the daring conclusion that the soul of man is a mere material substance. He ventures to state that, "for every fact or consciousness, whether in the domain of sense of thought, or of emotion a definite molecular condition of motion or structure is set up in the brain." For instance, in the United States, before her marriage, I observed that Miss Grant, the daughter of the occupant of one of the most august positions in the world, was generally referred to in the papers as "Nellie," as though the paragraphist who wrote the item had been her playfellow from infancy: and even Lady Dufferin, I see, has become "Kate" in the elegant phraseology of a United States magazine. Though how "Kate" could have been elicited from Her Excellency's real Christian name, I don't know. Of course, this is a small matter to which I have alluded, but it is not without significance when regarded as a national characteristic. After all, the women of this continent are ladies as refined, high minded and noble hearted, as are to be found in any country in the world, and the sooner we get rid of this vulgar socialism the better, and the first place where the correction should be made is in our school lists, which are official documents, where young ladies ought to be entered in their full Christian names, and not in their "nick-names," as I have often seen done.

DECAY OF RELIGIOUS AUTHORITY.

The "decay of authority," about which we hear a great deal, is a decay of authority which has its basis not in the right nature of things, but in pretense and sham. The trouble with the whole theory of an infallible church, Romish or Protestant, is that men are finding out that it is a myth and not a reality. The time has gone by when a monopoly of truth was conceded to

They do not, it is true, distinctly give out that mind is matter (at least Professor Tyndall does not), yet is it plainly to be seen that, in their molecular system, they flatter themselves they have discovered the true source and essence of consciousness and cogitation. As we have intimated, however, Mr. Tyndall (the master-spirit of the materialistic clique) has, till now, been exceedingly careful not to commit himself outright” to the daring conclusion that the soul of man is mere material substance. He ventures to state that, “for every fact or consciousness, whether in the domain of sense of thought, or of emotion a definite molecular condition of motion or structure is set up in the brain.” The relation of physics to consciousness, the Professor maintains to be a self-evident fact—and we are ready to concede the point—but that “a definite molecular action, and definite thought in the brain,” are convertible phrases, and bear the same meaning, our common-sense instincts force us to deny. Ay, and keen of penetration as the Professor is, and talented beyond the most brilliant of his associates, it will require a still profounder view of molecular phenomena on his part than he has yet achieved (and his discoveries in this respect have been astounding) to point out where the functions of mere matter cease, and consciousness and cogitation commence. The Professor is magnanimous enough to admit, that “though a definite thought and a definite molecular action in the brain occur simultaneously, we do not possess the intellectual organ, nor apparently any rudiment of the organ which would enable us to pass, by a process of reasoning, from one to the other.” What we consider the most admirable trait in Professor Tyndall’s character—a trait which he invariably betrays in his philosophical researches—is his candor and honesty.

even Lady Dufferin, I see, has become “Kate” in the elegant phraseology of a United States magazine. Though how “Kate” could have been elicited from Her Excellency’s real Christian name, I don’t know. Of course, this is a small matter to which I have alluded, but it is not without significance when regarded as a national characteristic. After all, the women of this continent are ladies as refined, high minded and noble hearted, as are to be found in any country in the world, and the sooner we get rid of this vulgar socialism the better, and the first place where the correction should be made is in our school lists, which are official documents, where young ladies ought to be entered in their full Christian names, and not in their “nick-names,” as I have often seen done.

DECAY OF RELIGIOUS AUTHORITY.

The “decay of authority,” about which we hear a great deal, is a decay of authority which has its basis not in the right nature of things, but in pretense and sham. The trouble with the whole theory of an infallible church, Romish or Protestant, is that men are finding out that it is a myth and not a reality. The time has gone by when a monopoly of truth was conceded to the clergy. Gown and band no longer constitute their wearer an oracle. Democracy is taking possession of the religious as well as the political world. But in neither sphere does democracy mean the subversion of authority. It means the overthrow of factitious authority; the denial of any right to govern based on accident of birth or circumstance. But democracy does not mean anarchy or mob law. Its first stage, politically, is to vest all power in the people; its next, which we are now trying to reach, is the selection by the people of the men most fit to conduct the public business. So of religious democracy; it means first the absolute denial of “divine right” vested in either bishops or presbyters or congregations, the absolute right to every man to seek truth in his own way. But nothing can remove that fact fixed in the very nature of things, by which men acknowledge and follow the natural leadership of merit.

It is reported at Ottawa that France has admitted that all territorial rights on the shore of Newfoundland belong to great Britain, who undertakes to preserve law; while French fishermen are to be allowed to use the beach for drying fish.

Centennial Christian Homes.

THE great number of visitors in Philadelphia, during the Centennial Exhibition, necessitates the opening of private homes for board and lodging. Many Christian families, who are unwilling to open their doors to a promiscuous public, have arranged a plan by which they give admission to Christians and their friends. This will be equally pleasant to Christian people abroad who may not wish to be associated with the great variety of characters brought together in hotels and public boarding-houses.

In order to have this select class the price of board is generally much lower than prevails by other arrangements, varying from $5 to $14 a week, and from $1 to $2.50 per day. Each family fixes its own price, and receives its pay direct from its guest. Those wishing to secure places under this arrangement will please

TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER OF U. S. TROOPS.
—A FORTY-EIGHT HOURS FIGHT.

Chicago, June 7.—A special to the Times from Bismarck recounts the late encounter with the Indians. On the morning of the 25th an Indian village, twenty miles above the mouth of Little Horn, was reported about three miles long and half a mile wide and fifteen miles away. Custer pushed his command rapidly through. They had made a march of seventy-eight miles in 24 hours, preceding the battle.

When near the village it was discovered that the Indians were moving in hot haste, as if retreating.

Reno, with seven companies of the 7th cavalry, was ordered to the left to attack the village at its head, while Custer, with five companies, went to the right and commenced a vigorous attack.

Reno fell on them with three companies of cavalry and was almost instantly surrounded, and after one hour or more of vigorous fighting, during which he lost Lieuts. Hodson and McIntosh, and Dr. Dewolf and twelve men, with several Indian scouts killed and many wounded. He cut his way through the river and gained a bluff 300 feet in height where he entrenched and was soon joined by Col. Benton, with four companies.

In the meantime the Indians resumed the attack, making repeated and desperate charges which were repulsed with great slaughter to the Indians. They gained higher ground than Reno occupied, and as the arms were longer in range and better than the Cavalry's, they kept up a fire until night fall. During the night Reno strengthened his position and was prepared for another attack, which was made at daylight. The day wore on, Reno had lost in killed and wounded a large portion of his command, forty odd having been killed before the bluff was reached. Many of them in a hand to hand conflict with the Indians, who outnumbered them 10 to 1, and his men had been without water for 36 hours.

The suffering was heartrending. In this state of affairs they determined to reach the water at all hazards, and Col. Benton made a rally with his Company and routed the main body of the Indians, who were guarding the approach to the river.

The Indian sharp shooters were nearly opposite the mouth of the ravine through which the brave boys approached the river, but the attempt was made, and though one man was killed and seven wounded the water was gained and the command relieved.

When the fighting ceased for the night, Reno further prepared for attacks. There had been forty-eight hours fighting with no word from Custer, twenty-four hours more of fighting and the suspense ended, when the Indians abandoned their village in

LYNCH LAW.—A mob of masked men on Friday night, 7th inst., entered the goal at Lancaster, Ky., and seizing the gaoler took a colored man named Pierce out of the prison and hung him. REMARKABLE SUICIDE IN CHICAGO.—A Chicago paper says:—A man came to the Palmer House, in this city, registered his name, went to his room, and killed himself in several ways, viz.: by the knife, razor, revolver, rope, poison, scalding water, and fire. He said he liked Chicago so well that he wanted it to beat St. Louis in the suicide line on the 4th. He said St. Louis could try to get up something in the same line next centennial.

Gen. Terry Gibbon commanding his own infantry, had arrived. Soon an officer came rushing into camp and related that he had found Custer dead, stripped naked but not mutilated, and near him his two brothers Col. Tom and Boston Custer, his brother-in-law Col. Calhoun and his nephew Col. Yates, Col. Keough, Capt. Smith, Lieut. Crittenden, Lieut. Sturgis, Col. Cooks, Lieut. Porter, Lieut. Harrington, Dr. Lord Mack Kellogg, the Bismarck Tribune correspondent and 190 men and scouts, only one Crow scout remained to tell the tale. "All are dead."

Custer was surrounded on every side by Indians and horses and fell as they fought on the skirmish line or in line of battle. Custer was among the last who fell, but when his cheering voice was no longer heard, the Indians made easy work of the remainder.

The bodies of all, save the newspaper correspondent, were stripped, and most of them were horribly mutilated. Custer was not mutilated. He was shot through the body and through the head.

Col. Smith arrived at Bismarck Wednesday night, with 35 of the wounded. The Indians lost heavily in the battle. The village numbered 1800 lodges, and it is thought there were 4,000 warriors.

Gen. Custer was directed by Gen. Terry to find and feel for the Indians but not to fight unless Terry arrived with the infantry and with Gibbons' column. The casualties foot up 260 killed and 52 wounded.

A locomotive without furnace has commenced running in Paris on one of the street railways. It has a reservoir of superheated water, which furnishes a constant supply of steam for moving the vehicle. Two very peculiar marriages in low life were performed the other day in the chapel of the prison of St. Lazare, Paris. A short time ago two men, Moillard and Vignault, were sentenced to twenty years' hard labour, while two women, their partners in crime were condemned to a short term. As Moillard loved Eugenie Plat and Vignault loved Hortense Couturier, they were deeply afflicted at the prospect of a long separation, and therefore confessed to sixteen other robberies in addition to those for which they had been found guilty. This necessitated a new trial, and as Moillard and Vignault foresaw, both Eugenie Plat and Hortense Couturier implicated with their lovers, had their penalties increased from imprisonment into transportation. Moillard and Vignault got twenty years more.

The Court of Appeals has decided that the steamer Amerique was lost, not through any defect in her construction or equipment, nor yet through stress of weather but simply "through the fault of the captain and crew, through bad handling and through an inadequate acquaintance with her steamengines and the working of her pumps." A despatch from Rome, June 21, says:—There was a very curious scene to-day at the Vatican. The Pope, with many Cardinals, received a large body of German pilgrims, who had just received the Eucharist from the hands of Cardinal Ledochowski at the high altar in St. Peter's and then prayed at the Apostles' tomb in the crypt. Baron Loe read a Latin address denouncing tyrannical laws against the Church as a Satanic war against morality. An immense number of various objects were then presented to the Pope, including chalices, vestments, and linen in great quantities for the use and service of the altar also a very considerable sum of money. The Voce reports that he spoke of Antiochus and his ending, and made some terrible comparisons. The Pope's voice is still powerful; it filled the large hall. Then the Germans begged to sing to him one of their German hymns, and when that was finished they gave a German hurrah, "Es lebe Pius IX; hoch!" with three times three. German cheering is a strange sound in the halls of the Vatican.
